CONGRESSIONAL HAPPENINGS IN WASHINGTON

By CLARENCE J. BROWN
Member of Congress

From every section of the nation comes the report the 6th War Loan Drive is going over big. Every thinking American knows the buying of these bonds will bring victory earlier and our boys home quicker. They also know war bonds are a safe investment, and are just as good as United States currency, or even better, for they can be converted into currency at any time, while earning interest as long as they are held. So remember—Better Buy a Bigger Bond.

All Federal employees in Washington, other than those in the postal service, were required to remain on their jobs Thanksgiving Day. Leave could not even be granted for working wives to quit an hour early to prepare the Thanksgiving dinner. Absence from their posts of duty would have seriously interfered with the war effort, they were told. Yet on Friday, November 10th when President Roosevelt returned from Hyde Park, following his triumph at the polls, all government workers were given permission to leave their work and join in welcoming the conquering hero home as he rode slowly down Pennsylvania Avenue, accompanied by Vice President Wallace and Vice President-elect Truman.

In June of 1943 the House voted to kill the Federal crop insurance plan because it had proven costly and unworkable. Last week the same House, completely reversing itself, enacted a new crop insurance law, under which wheat, cotton and flax crops will immediately become insurable against almost every hazard with about every other farm product to be included later. A limitation restricting cost of administration to not more than twenty-five percent of the total premiums received was written into the law. The change in the House position on crop insurance resulted directly from the action of both the Democratic and Republican National Conventions early last summer in writing into the party platforms pledges of support for such a program. If crop insurance can be furnished to the farmers of America on a sound actuarial basis, at premiums they can afford to pay, under a system which will take care of bonafide crop losses and still guard against unscrupulous practices by the few, all agriculture will be greatly benefited. Time, and time alone, will prove whether a workable crop insurance program can be set up and administered by the government.

The House has before it this week the Post-War Highway Bill, which provides for a three year program of Federal aid to the States, on a fifty-fifty basis, for the construction of Federal and State highways and farm to market roads. The bill calls for a Federal expenditure of five hundred million dollars a year for road improvement. The Senate has already passed a somewhat similar measure. Many amendments have been written into the legislation by the House, and more are expected to be considered and accepted before it finally becomes law.

Leon Henderson, staunch New Dealer and former stormy petrel head of the Office of Price Administration, is said to be scheduled for early appointment as Economic Advisor to General Dwight Eisenhower in preparation for being designated to run the civilian and economic affairs of the United States zone in Occupied Germany, once the Nazis are defeated. Somewhere or other the idea appeals to us as a good one—for certainly Leon would be in his element, and the Germans deserve the punishment.

Keep your eyes on the government disposal of surplus war goods. There have already been quite a number of very peculiar transactions in connection with the disposal of certain government property, and many observers in Washington believe a real national scandal may develop in this particular field unless corrective steps are soon taken.

In the last two weeks there has been a great deal of talk in high places regarding the shortage of munitions, especially of small arms ammunition and heavy shells, for use on the Western Front. Both General Eisenhower and President Roosevelt have mentioned the dangerous shortage which exists and the need for increased production. There has been some inclination to blame American industry for the present situation. The truth of the matter is quite a number of ordnance plants were ordered closed down last summer and others to reduce their working schedules to

School Minstrel Set For December 7th

The third annual Red and White Minstrel show given by the boys' chorus of our high school will be presented Thursday, Dec. 7th at 8:15. In the past two years the performance has been given in the school auditorium but due to the fact that both the stage and auditorium are not adequate for the large numbers of both performers and listeners, the minstrel will be given in the opera house.

The show will consist of an overture by the minstrel band, a lot of snappy songs, good jokes by the end men and dancing. Those who have seen Kenny Huffman as an end man won't want to miss him in his third year, a natural who has helped to make the shows in years past. Roger Ush, Paul Struewing and Harold Stormont are each serving his second term as an end man, three more senior boys who will be greatly missed in next year's performance. These four are being ably supported by two new jesters, Lamar Hamman and Jim Wiscup. Denny Frey is replacing George Abels this year as the "middle man" and his pleasing personality and ease with which he carries on the show is a credit to his ever popular predecessor.

COLLEGE NEWS

Miss Mary E. Klatt of Jamestown, and Mr. Fred M. Lewis, of near Xenia were married recently. Both are former students of C.C. where the romance started. Mr. Lewis is in military service for his country.

Miss Marion Muller, a member of the Waves located at Dahlgren, Virginia, spent the Thanksgiving vacation with her parents and family. She returned to camp Monday afternoon.

The grimness of war was brought home to two families of the college recently. S-Sgt. Everett Wright was killed in France Nov. 12. He was a nephew of Mrs. S. C. Wright and a cousin of Prof. Steele. John McSawney of London, Ohio, 18-year old brother of Mrs. Eloise Kling, is reported as missing in France. Prayers are raised that he may be found and returned to his family in the days to come.

Members of the English class were in Columbus the Saturday before Thanksgiving where they attended the Hartman theatre. The play was "Othello."

Dr. and Mrs. Paul Miller and children ate Turkey under the paragon roof of Prof. and Mrs. A. Hostetler, her parents, Thanksgiving day.

Reverend Marion S. Hostetler was the radio preacher over a hook-up in Utah and surrounding states the five Sunday evenings of October. The Salt Lake ministerial association members take turns giving the sermons. Rev. Hostetler is the son of Prof. and Mrs. A. J. Hostetler and member of the class of '32.

The roof of the Science building is being replaced with a new one this week by the Mohler Roofing Company, of Springfield.

The Cedarville Ministerial Association held its regular meeting Monday evening of this week. Dr. F. A. Jurkat gave the background of the American Bible Society. There are several life members of the society in this community.

The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Cedarville College will be held Friday, December 8. Mr. Joseph A. Finney, 06, Xenia attorney-at-law, is president of the board.

Prof. Hostetler gave a very interesting talk at chapel Tuesday morning. Quoting Dr. Appel of the U. of Tenn. Medical School, he pointed out that 1,000,000 of the children now in school will become mental patients if we don't change our ways with them. Mental hospital patients number 700,000, one-half of whom would not be there if proper care had obtained. One million 300,000 draftees have been found mentally unfit for war Causes—broken homes, school emphasis on things other than personality, lack of doctors and nurses, too much money in the hands of young folks. Remedy—plenty of good hard work.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Westerfield of Cincinnati spent the Thanksgiving vacation with Mrs. Cora Trumbo and Mildred.

one shift. Who is responsible for such orders? Those who take credit for the victories must also accept responsibility for the mistakes which are made in the war planning.

Complete official election returns from the 7th District gave Dewey 83,749; Roosevelt 59,747; Stewart 84,654; Lausche 56,775; Taft, 80,942; Pickrel 57,289; Brown 84,770; Cashin 52,403. Your humble servant is very grateful for the fine vote given him.

Reception for Hon. Whitelaw Reid 52 Years Ago Notable Event

Herald readers are taken back this week to an event that happened fifty-two years ago. It is a story of the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, New York and Paris, the former being a native of this place. The story was published in the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, that paper having sent a reporter here for the event. The paper carrying this story is mellow with age and partly mutilated. The paper was brought to this office by Ralph Fitzwater, and the account of the reception tendered the Reids will be of interest to those who recall the event and had part in it as it will be to the younger generation that probably has not been informed that a Cedarvillian was once the Republican candidate for Vice President of the U. S. on a ticket with Benjamin Harrison of Indiana, as the candidate for president.

Both were defeated by Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson. A little background might be of interest to the public and just what one of the political issues of that day was. It was in the early days of the first labor unions, the printers of the country being the strongest. It was also the pioneer days for the introduction of the Mergenthaler Linotype, a type-setting machine that set the type on a metal slug. Until this time all news matter was set by hand, the letter of each word having to be picked from a square box in a drawer-like case that held a certain amount of each letter. The larger daily papers of that day employed fifty or a hundred type-setters and were paid a customary wages of $12 to $15 a week, six ten-hour days constituted a week. In this country as late as 1900 a dollar a day was a good wage for printers in the country shops, and many a girl worked for $2 a week.

"The printer's union was much opposed to the new-fangled method of setting type on the ground that such machines would throw thousands of men out of work. Whitelaw Reid was then head of the New York Tribune and saw the possibility of the type-setting machine, as well as its financial aid and Mr. Reid with some other publishers came to his aid and the Tribune composing room the field for development. This angered the union printers who tried and did cause Mr. Reid much trouble but he would not yield. When he was nominated for vice president the printers with other labor organizations campaigned against both Republican nominees and both were defeated. As years went by the Mergenthaler Linotype machine neared perfection until today the smallest newspaper must depend on "machine composition." The story of the public reception is of local interest but the political background will give the reader a connection that is not mentioned in the Commercial Gazette.

Cedarville, O., August 20—The greatest event in Cedarville for many years was the reception given today to Hon. Whitelaw Reid, Greene County's favorite son, who arrived here this morning with his family by carriage from Xenia, proceeding to the home of his aged mother, near the village, where a number of representative citizens and prominent Republicans greeted him. He is the same pleasant, affable gentleman as when a young man resided here. Old friends for miles around assembled at 3 o'clock in the afternoon on the lovely grounds belonging to the residence Hon. Andrew Jackson, half a mile south of the village, to welcome him to his home. Large numbers of people came in carriages from Springfield and other places and a special train carried many from Xenia, county seat.

The reception was in the nature of an informal reception gotten up by citizens of all parties, Mr. William Blair, editor of the Cedarville Herald, and a member of the Typographical Union, having been instrumental principally in organizing the affair.

George Harper, rock-ribbed Democrat, president of the meeting, and rode in the carriage with Mr. and Mrs. Reid to the grounds. On the platform, among other notables, were Judge Hulick, of Bettsville, candidate on the Republican ticket for Congress in this district; Colonel Robert Doan, of Wilmington, present Congressman, and other prominent persons from all political parties.

As Mr. Reid stepped from the carriage he was at once surrounded by old friends and acquaintances, who kept him busy handshaking for quite a while.

Hon. Andrew Jackson called the meeting to order and introduced Mr. George Harper, who in turn introduced Mr. Reid in the following neat speech:

MR. HARPER'S WELCOME
"It is the pleasant duty appointed to me by generous neighbors, of welcoming home to the scene of his boyhood days, and to the present home of his venerable mother, one who has since achieved for himself, for his native village, and for his country at large, many and great honors. We have long known him to respect and honor him. He lived and toiled among us as student, teacher and editor. Whitelaw Reid honored God in the days of his youth, and applied himself to intellectual pursuits. In youth he was active and untiring in educating his own mind. Since then he has been as active in training the minds of other. He has distinguished himself in journalism, literature, politics and diplomacy.

We honor him for his courage and industry, his "great intellectual and moral powers, and because he used them to elevate, educate and ennoble mankind. We feel that the interest, the liberty and the rights of the people of this country would be safe in his hands. One of the great political parties has honored him by nominating him for the place of vice president. You are come to see and to hear him; and I have the pleasure and the honor to introduce to you, Ladies and gentlemen, the Honorable Whitelaw Reid." (Great Applause.)

On Mr. Reid being introduced tremendous applause greeted him as he stepped to the front of the platform, lasting some time.

MR. REID'S ADDRESS
Mr. Harper, old friends and neighbors—This is indeed an ideal welcome, and my only regret is to find myself wholly unprepared for it; unprepared, because I had not anticipated such a company; unprepared, because I had expected only to meet old friends and neighbors, and to shake them by the hand.

But it is, nevertheless, an ideal welcome in site of the additional necessity of making a few remarks, because you give me the privilege of meeting my old friends and neighbors here without distinction of party, sex, race—without any distinction whatever.

I have the privilege of meeting you simply as men and women, who have known me from my boyhood, and many of whom have first known and regarded me for my parents' sake.

It will be the proudest laurel I shall ever hope to win if, at the end of my career, it may still be said that I never forfeited that regard. (Applause.) No applause can ever be so grateful to any right-thinking man as that of the people who knew him best, have known him longest, and have followed his whole career with that kindly, yet critical, watchfulness which elders and playmates give to the children they have known. Better far, it seems to me, certainly, and sweeter far, the cheer of one's native village than the proudest honors of the metropolis, or even the nation. (Applause.)

It is great pleasure to receive this testimonial of kindly good will from old friends and neighbors at your hands. (Turning to Mr. Harper.) We have known each other, I shall not venture to say in the presence of wives, both of whom are considerably younger than ourselves, quite how long, but certainly over a third of a century; and in that time we have always differed in politics, and never differed on anything else. (Laughter.) I hope that distinction may never vary, unless it shall vary in one way; and I have almost abandoned hope of ever seeing any change in that particular. (Laughter.)

It is another source of pleasure on this occasion, and a source also of some sadness to me on this spot, surrounded by so many memories of one of Cedarville's best and most lamented citizens (James Dunlap). I heard first of his illness in Syria, just as I was taking the steamer for Alexandria; and from Egypt I shall always feel grateful that I found the time to write him a letter of sympathy, and as it proved of farewell. Few pleasures have been more grateful to me than the thought that I have been since told that letter gave him pleasure. (Applause.)

I am glad to meet here the present proprietor of these beautiful grounds (Hon. Andrew Jackson), and to go back, as his presence and name carry the back to the days when he and I were young, and his father was the Brigadier General commanding the military forces of, I think, half a dozen of the surrounding counties. In those days a Brigadier General was a very great man, and those of you who have never had the pleasure of knowing Robert Jackson, as I have known him, can form no idea of the great dignity he carried with him.

Now, gentlemen, I propose to throw myself absolutely upon your indulgence. My chief regret is that I find here these omnipresent recorders of unimportant events, who are engaged at this moment in chronicling what I as an editor, would instantly tell them to cut down to a stick-full.

I do not wish that this occasion should take on formal character whatever. It gave me the greatest pleasure to accept your invitation to meet my old friends, without distinction of party. You could not have conferred a more grateful welcome upon me, and I have hoped that it would be absolutely a family affair. I sincerely trust I may not be thought to overstep the proprieties of the suggestion that has been twice used on this platform; that really the greatest pleasure I have, next to the pleasure I have in seeing so many familiar faces, is the pleasure I know it gives to a certain dear old lady, now in her eighty-ninth year, and the greatest regret I have is that a similar pleasure might not have been vouchsafed to that good gray head so many of you knew, and all loved who knew it.

Once more, Mr. Harper and ladies and gentlemen, I tender you my most grateful thanks for your kindness, and for all the good will which this meeting shows. I beg you to understand that I appreciate it more because I know what the community is.

The paper being mutilated and a paragraph missing we go on to the next—Ed.

Mrs. Reid was on the platform and took a deep interest in all the proceedings.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Reid took his stand at the entrance to the platform, shaking hands of all the multitude that crowded about him, in many instances recalling some reminiscences of days long gone by. Old school mates whom he had not seen for years, and whose hair like his own, had now turned to silver gray, crowded around him, as well as old friends of his parents, some of whom had traveled for miles through the hot weather to greet him. At the same time the ladies had taken Mr. Reid in charge, and organized quite a reception. The crowd about the platform was so dense that it was nearly impossible to press through, it being found necessary in length to form the people into lines in order to have any system of regularity.

Reporters were present from all over the country, including a representative of the New York World. This was quite a surprise to Mr. Reid who had no idea that there was to be anything more than merely an informal reception, and who had made no preparations in the way of a speech.

Nearly every old friend that greeted him had some pleasant little speech prepared, and there were many happy little hits made. One old Democrat said, "Well, the Republicans have the laugh now, but they that laugh loudest who laugh last." Mr. Reid clapped him on the back and said, "Now Thomas, how about that cistern you once built for me?" There seemed to be some tender reminiscence connected with the cistern affair that caused the old fellow to be a little nonplussed.

Half of the hospitality offered them they could not have got through the long list short of a year or two. There were people from all around, who had either attended school with Whitelaw, or had been his pupils. Great big strapping bearded fellows shook him by the hand (and it was noticeable that Mr. Reid had to use his left hand on account of a recent accident to his right hand) and told how they had snowballed him in younger days, and how Whitelaw had licked them for not having their lessons in algebra properly. Mr. Reid father had been a militia officer of considerable prominence in his day, and there were many men present who had served under him.

There were cousins, and second cousins and numerous other relatives who who had not seen Mr. Reid for twenty or more years, and in nearly every instance he recognized them without much trouble. One old gentleman, told of how when a little boy, Whitelaw played around in his shop, and under the old bench. Many old ladies who had been intimate friends of his parents for years, and who had nursed him when he was a baby, shook him heartily by the hand, and with tears in her eyes gave him their blessing.

There was not one word of politics in the whole affair, and though there were prominent and excellent speakers, present, no one was called upon for remarks. It was a general reunion of the people with a beloved son, in whose prosperity they were all interested. When Mr. Blair, the editor of the village paper, was introduced, Mr. Reid greeted him warmly. Mr. Blair is a member of the Typographical Union, and was strong in the fight against the New York Tribune, but was the prime mover in getting up the reception, working constantly all the short time allowed in getting it up. Mr. Reid said to him: "I read your paper regularly when in Paris, and saw many items of interest concerning my old home town and my friends. I expect you have considerable up-hill work to run a paper in a small place like Cedarville, but undoubtedly you make more money than I did in running a newspaper in Xenia.

Everybody was charmed with Mrs. Reid, who mingled socially with the many friends of her husband. Some of the villagers has expected a grand stately lady, who would have no feeling in common with them, and were most agreeably disappointed on meeting her to find what a counterpart she was of her most excellent husband.

At the conclusion of the reception, which lasted fully a couple of hours, Mr. and Mrs. Reid returned to their carriage, and were driven to the home of the aged mother, where they will remain over the Sabbath and until sometime Tuesday, when they will start for the East.

The love and reverence of Mr. Reid for his venerable mother, who is now eighty-four years of age, is very touching indeed. Never the weather so cold nor the business so urgent that he has not come as fast as cars could take him in response to any message announcing her illness, and out of his wealth he has beautified and remodeled her home, the old family residence, into the finest in that section. When he referred to her in his short speech his eyes filled with tears, his voice trembled, and in every way showed his great affection for her. The old lady takes great pride in her son, and is thoroughly wrapped up in him and his future.

Mr. Reid will receive nearly the entire vote of Cedarville Township from all parties, as a compliment to their fellow townsmen, to a man, who, though he has gained prominence in the world, does not forget his old friends, but always glad to see them. It is said that in his busiest days when managing editor of the New York Tribune, and when "not at home" to some of the most influential men of the nation, some old friends of his childhood, happening in New York and sending up his name, would be immediately admitted for a half-hour chat. It seemed to do him good at such times to throw business worries to one side and for a few moments enjoy a talk about old times, "when you and I were young Maggie." And several of these friends, who have received situations and aid through him at times. A couple of gentlemen from Springfield endeavored to secure from Mr. Reid a promise that he would address them some time during the campaign, but he informed them that he did not intend making long and set speeches during the campaign, but said that if he could come West at some date to suit them he would like to take part with some other speakers in a meeting in that city, but would promise a speech of a few minutes.

All in all, it was a grand occasion, and the gentleman in whose honor the reception was held enjoyed it as much as did those who got it up.

PRESS-RADIO GIVEN CREDIT FOR RURAL AREA CHANGES

"We must recognize that a great transformation has taken place in rural life," President Ira D. Vayhinger of Cedarville College told the Greene County Ministerial Association meeting held in Xenia, Monday. Mechanized methods have brought all about. Only 25 percent of the population of our lands today are farmers in occupation. Even 47 percent of the people who reside in the rural areas are not engaged in rural work. Although they live in the country they are employed in nearby cities. Surveys indicate that there are, on the average for every 300 people in the country, a single church. However that does not mean that the average of 300 attend every church. A large percentage do not go anywhere.

"A modern farmer," the speaker continued, "if he is to keep abreast of developments, must possess the best education that can be obtained. The farmer today has become urban and the ancient walls between the city and the country have been broken down by the press, radio and mechanized transportation."

President Vayhinger also told the group that Cedarville College is to conduct a training conference for ministers of this area which top flight clerics of the nation will be on the teaching faculty. He stated that the largest enrollment permitted will be 50 of the clergy of this area who must be certified by church heads. The tentative date will be May 21 to 25, 1945. The Greene County Ministerial Association will work with Cedarville College in the conference project.

The next meeting of the association has been set for Dec. 18 at the First Presbyterian Church, Xenia, with wives to be invited.

GREENE COUNTY REAL ESTATE IS GIVEN NEW VALUE

Greene County's real estate tax duplicate under the new appraisal will be $39,279,610, an increase of $3,978,740 over last year, according to an announcement by James J. Curlett, county auditor.

The new realty valuations approved by the state board of tax appeals, show an average increase of 11.26 percent, ranging from 8.42 percent in Xenia to 32.82 percent in Bath township. They are substantially higher in all districts, Xenia's new tax duplicate was increased from $8,146,960 to $8,832,520.

New construction in Bath township is responsible for the increase in that township.

SGT. ROBERT RICHARDS GETS SILVER STAR FOR GALLANTRY

Award of the Silver Star for gallantry in action has been received by Master Sgt. Robert Richards, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Richards, who has been serving with an infantry division in Germany and has been in combat since shortly after D-Day.

His company was "pretty badly torn up" during the fighting near Metz and he took charge of the remainder of his group and another company, Sgt. Richards reported in a letter received by his parents.

OUR BOYS ARE WATCHING THE BOND SALE

So far the Sixth War bond sale has not met with the response expected at this stage of the campaign. This is true in both large and small cities and towns. We are not concerned at this time so much as to how other counties met this issue but we do have an interest in this campaign in behalf of Greene county that did so well on all previous bond sales.

When you stop to think that our boys have been purchasing war bonds and the pay is taken out of their $50 monthly salary. This should not be necessary and it may not be fair to the boys as we see it. Giving up home, family and friends to chance their life with disease and bullets is enough and the public should not expect the boys to sacrifice everything while most of the public garners war profit dollars. The boys cannot sell their bonds at the end of the sixty day period as thousands now on the government pay roll do. This the boys in service do not like and they express themselves in plain terms. Moreover every service man who returns home and takes a job or goes into business starts immediately to pay social security taxes and income taxes to help pay for their bonds.

With such a picture as this the least those who remain at home can do is to make liberal purchases of the Sixth War Bonds. Failure of this bond sale will depress the boys at the front. They are vexed now over a shortage in munitions and the strikes for more pay that are reported each day. As the bond advertisement on page four says "buy bonds as a ticket to get the boys back home." We must not fail.

Short and Kimmel will not be tried for their supposed part in Pearl Harbor debacle. The New Dealers do not any more lies than possible fastened on the White House. Some commentators say neither can be convicted at any time in any kind of a court. It would be shocking if both produced evidence that they had followed orders and did not want to offend Japan because she is our best customer. (FDR to Sec. Hull when protesting the shipment of scrap iron to Japan) The public might be interested in knowing who in this country sold the scrap iron to Japan? Who sold Japan ship loads of oil? The White House should answer.

The Greene County Democrats are in a mixup among themselves. The requested recount in a Xenia precinct proved to be a flop, Prosecutor Shoup ruled against the petition. You must designate some candidate that was injured by a crooked count. Here is the reaction. Democratic officials are in no mood to talk about a recount for it reflects on their honesty and integrity. Hence, they would like to have the Republicans ask for a recount for any candidate on the ticket just to prove to the sore Democrats there was nothing wrong. The Democratic officials are talking about some private affairs of a party leader that, faced federal charges recently. It is the Democratic light and the Republicans will let the New Dealers settle their own affairs in their own way.

The return of 250 or more men in the 37th Division, mostly Ohio boys, a fact most all members of the National Guard that were promised return home after one years service, now are back after 32 months, nearly three years. To them it was just another Roosevelt promise not kept. The same situation exists in Canada where the government wants to break its promise of "no draft" and send 16,000 men who listed for home duty, into the front ranks on the German line. The situation in Canada is near mutiny and serious trouble is predicted. Canadians want to run their own country without dictation from Churchill, who issues orders to the White House, also, and we furnish men, money and powder to fight King George's war.

Draft of boys and girls 18 years of age for military purpose will prove a nightmare at the White House before he issue is settled. The Catholic and Protestant leaders are opposing it as well as the W. C. T. U. and hundreds of feminine social and literary clubs. The American Federation of Labor is now on record against it. Those for taking boys and girls from homes before their education can be completed profit in some way by military rule.

Upton Close goes off the air after his Sunday afternoon broadcast. His talk on "Americanism" and what it is and means last Sunday was the best we have ever heard. This Sunday he will discuss "Communism". He has been forced off the air by the New Deal administration because he exposed the Roosevelt-Hillman connection during the last campaign. The same force that put Close off the air can close every church door in America as Stalin did in Russia.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Thanksgiving Day, 1944, brings us many reasons for which to give sincere thanks. Today sees our Armed Forces gaining steadily on all fronts. The end of the European phase of the war is in sight. Our enemies in the Pacific are gradually being driven from the lands they have enslaved. The promise that tomorrow holds forth is a happy one. We have weathered our darkest days of the war and now see the first rays of the dawn of the sun of peace. A peace in the winning of which we can all share the glory. The work of you on the home front will be no less valiant and no less a contribution to victory than that of our fighting men. A united and fighting America. So this Thanksgiving Day, 1944, let us humbly raise our thanks to God for the strength and courage that He has given us to combat our enemies. Let us never forget the vital part that faith, courage and self-sacrifice, the characteristics that are religion, will have played in the victory we can now foresee.

Series E Bonds are the Number One buy for the average investor. They come in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 and sell for 75 percent of their maturity value. They pay $4 for every $3 invested if held to maturity, which is ten years from the month in which they were issued. You may redeem them without notice at any time 60 days after issue date at fixed redemption values. The amount of these bonds originally issued during any one calendar year that may be held by any one person at any one time is limited to $5,000 maturity value.

MARIONETTE SHOW

Now Playing in Rike's Corner Window.

As a special treat for children and adults of the Miami Valley, Rike's presents the famous Suzari Marionettes in an unusual Christmas production. The corner window has been transformed into a tiny English village of the Sixteenth Century. The marionettes, including jolly Old Santa, sing, dance, and tell a traditional Yuletide story of Merrie England. A group of skilled puppeteers, concealed behind the scenes, operate the strings which make these marionettes perform. This marionette show will be repeated at intervals of about ten minutes daily during regular store hours from now until Christmas. Bring the children to see Rike's Marionette Show—in the corner window—Second at Main.
